2015 Education Forum

A Model of Continuous Improvement for Teachers of Color

Presented by

Travis J. Bristol, Ph.D.
Research & Policy Fellow
Stanford Center for Opportunity Policy in Education

In schools, we create learning opportunities that incorporate students' diverse experiences into the classroom. However, we do not create differentiated learning spaces for teachers in schools and districts based on their racial/ethnic and gender identities. This presentation will highlight research from a study of Black male teachers in one large urban school district and then provide an example of a professional development initiative designed in response to the finding that these teachers experience unique socio-emotional challenges.
